In the United States businesses spend 250 billion dollars a year trying to get people to purchase their goods and services. Millions of dollars is used on marketing research each year. These companies are trying to figure out how people think, why they buy what they buy and the latest trends that are going on. This helps companies improve there product because they are able to see what the consumer wants. By improving there product they are able to make more money, that is why companies need consumers to give there opinions on certain things, these companies are willing to pay you for your opinion so that they can improve their product. waste their time on products the consumer does not want. So paying you 50 dollars to give your opinion is nothing compared to the millions that would be lost on advertising if the product fails.
